Comment Of The Day

A RUSSIAN CHALLENGE

Mr Khrushchev's decision to cut the Soviet Union's armed forces by 1,200,000 men would be widely acclaimed as a move in the right direction of universal disarmament if it were not for the fact that there are other considerations to be taken into account.

The mere fact that the Soviet Union is able to make such a drastic cutback only emphasizes that the Russians are now able to equip their forces with a wide range of nuclear weapons and thus more than make up for the reduction in manpower.

The move is not subtle, nor is it intended as such as the Soviet Premier made it quite clear in his address to the Supreme Soviet that they are in possession of weapons which can effectively deal with any enemy.

Tongue in cheek

THE appeal, therefore, to the nations of the free world to follow the Russian lead as an act of good faith must have been made with tongue in cheek as far as the West is concerned.

To the Russian people and those people who are unable to comprehend or who do not wish to probe the real meaning of the declaration and appeal it sounds good.

The Soviet Union again appears to them as a peace-loving nation devoid of any thought of aggression. Mr Khrushchev will undoubtedly keep hammering this point home at every conceivable opportunity as his propaganda weapon is enormous.

Large nucleus

THE scaling of the armed forces however, will provide the Soviet Union with a large nucleus for the projected all-out export drive and this will prove a major economic challenge to the West.

But despite Mr Khrushchev's confident tone in his speech to the Supreme Soviet there is no indication that the Russians will win the economic struggle.

The Western economic system is based on competition and therein lies its strength. It also functions best in production, sales and distribution when it is challenged.

It already has these advantages over the Russians, but there is no room for complacency as the West is all too well aware that the Soviet Union overtook the free nations' lead in the struggle for nuclear weapon supremacy.

Russian terms

THE Russians are already reaching out into world markets and the terms they are able to offer at first sight appear to give them advantages which Western industrialists cannot hope to counter.

In the past, these terms have often worked to the disadvantage of the recipient nation. If Burma found, to her cost, that attitude continued, then the West had little to lose.

But the Russians have learned fast in other fields and there is not the slightest doubt that they will take all the best the West has to offer and adapt them to their own methods of production and endeavour to outwit and outmanoeuvre the free world in its own spheres of economic influence. Thus the West remains backed by nuclear arms.

LLOYD'S FINAL OFFER

London, Japan, 17. The prospect of a breakdown of the Cyprus conference, which should settle final obstacles in the way of the Mediterranean island's independence, was being discussed for the first time among conference observers here tonight.

Mr Selwyn Lloyd, the Foreign Secretary, in what was described as a "take it or leave it" attitude, today told the conference that 122 square miles was the irreducible minimum for the two base areas which Britain is to retain in Cyprus under British sovereignty. His previous claim was 123½ square miles.

DECISIVE DAY

This is far from the 30 square miles which Archbishop Makarios, Cyprus' primate-elect and head of the Greek-Cypriot delegation, is prepared to concede.

Tomorrow is expected to be the decisive day for the conference, which began yesterday and should end by Tuesday.

The outcome, observers believed, depended on what answer Archbishop Makarios gives to the British statement on the base areas.

Should the conference end in failure, it could mean much more than the postponement of the February 19 date by which Cyprus should become independent.

FAILURE

Failure, it was stated, might nullify the whole structure of harmony negotiated patiently by Greece and Turkey in last year's Zurich agreement, and subsequently approved by Britain and the two Cypriot communities in the London agreement.

However, observers said, little has been disclosed so far about the detailed course of the conference. It was not known to what extent Britain would offer concessions on aspects other than the size of the bases.

Human beings made to measure

Los Angeles, Jan. 17. A medical leader said last night that within 50 years human beings could develop into a race of supermen with perfect health, high intelligence and a life expectancy of 125 years.

Dr E. Vincent Askey, president-elect of the American Medical Association, said mankind stands at the threshold of an age in which he will be able to control evolution.

"Before long man will possess the knowledge to plan the intelligence, physique and other characteristics of his offspring," Dr Askey said at a news conference.

This control will include pre-determining the weight, height, mental capacity and even colour of hair and eyes of a child, he said.

STRUCTURE

The structure of chromosomes, which determines the hereditary characteristics of a human being, may soon be subject to control through radiation, he said.

"In this way he would easily eradicate hereditary defects, and produce a race which would have a life expectancy of 125 or more years combined with high mental capacity," he said.—UPI.

A Buddhist service of exorcism will be held in the Hongkong Jockey Club for the next three days beginning this evening.

Dr S. N. Chau, senior Legislative Council Unofficial, will officiate at the opening ceremony.

LADY MACMILLAN VISITS A HAREM

Zaria, Jan. 17. Lady Dorothy Macmillan, wife of Britain's Prime Minister, Mr Harold Macmillan today paid her first visit to a harem — in the fabulous Thousand and One Nights atmosphere of the vast mudwalled palace of the Emir of Zaria.

The Emir, one of the principal traditional rulers of the Nigerian federation, has welcomed Lady Dorothy and her husband with some of the most impressive and colourful scenes of their Nigerian tour, which ends tomorrow.

After watching a spectacular "charge" of the Emir's herd — which stopped short close to the visitors in a flurry of horses' hooves—Lady Dorothy, accompanied by two other women, one a journalist, the other the wife of the Governor of Northern Nigeria, was taken to the women's quarters.

Mr Macmillan stayed behind — Mr Macmillan stayed behind — and were forbidden in such places.

The ladies were taken through official quarters ornately furnished and decorated with portraits of British Sovereigns and then through the Emir's private garden and the great interior courtyard of the palace, where the historical atmosphere was completed by the presence of the bunch.

The ladies were taken through official quarters ornately furnished and decorated with portraits of British Sovereigns and then through the Emir's private garden and the great interior courtyard of the palace, where the historical atmosphere was completed by the presence of the bunch.

Earlier, some of the harem women had been seen peering curiously through the narrow window slits at the welcoming ceremony against the palace gate.

And this afternoon, from 5 p.m., 49 Buddhist priests wearing saffron robes, will lead a procession round the race course. The procession will take 40 minutes.

The ceremony was sponsored by seven lay disciplines, Messrs Chen Chin-iao, Wong Yun-kau, Fung Kung-ha, Young Yat-lin, Tseng Pek-shan and Mao Man-tak.

The ceremony follows the recent death of the jockey, Mr Marco Samarec, during an accident on January 2.

But it is being held for all those who died unnatural deaths at the race course, over the years.

A yellow pennant was hoisted outside the Jockey Club yesterday afternoon denoting the approaching service of exorcism.

Fourteen black characters on the pennant, which is fringed in red, say: "The flag hoisted for the well-being of all in this world and the world beyond."

Seven pillars, and a shed containing the five tablets of the dead and Buddha statues, have been installed on the first floor of the stands.

The entire floor is a blaze of yellow colour.

RAF man fined for hitting wife

An RAF Sergeant, who hit his wife with a broom handle, was fined $50 by Mr P. E. X. Leonard at Kowloon Magistrate's Court this morning.

The defendant, Joseph Vlenczynski, 40, RAF Captain, pleaded guilty to a charge of common assault.

Mr Leonard, in finding Cranen bound him over for one year in default of $500.

The police prosecutor, Sub-Inspector E. Ellis, told the court that 6.30 p.m., January 10, Mrs Cranen, accompanied by her wife at home during the course of which he hit her with a broom handle.

Hearing is continuing.

The Full Court comprises Mr Justice J. R. Gregg, Senior Puisne Judge, and Mr Justice W. A. Blair-Kerr, Acting Puisne Judge.

Mr Clinton Li, Crown Counsel, is appearing for the Crown.

Indian Merchant's appeal

Mr B. A. Bernacchi, Counsel for an Indian merchant, submitted before the Full Court this morning that the decision of the trial district judge who convicted the merchant was "unreasonable."

The merchant, Lucky Dayaran Vasant, 28, who was sentenced to 18 months by District Judge E. J. Jennings, upon conviction on a charge of conspiracy to obtain Imperial Preference Certificates fraudulently, is appealing against the conviction.

In his submission, Mr Bernacchi said the district judge had failed in "the very vital of being misled when dealing with circumstantial evidence."

In the present case, "it was pure circumstantial evidence," Counsel said.

MISLED

The trial judge, he said, had "over-reached and misled himself by inserting from time to time links that are wholly wanting in the facts."

"Having given them links," Mr Bernacchi went on, "the theory of the guilt of the accused was, in fact, the whole of the evidence, both for the prosecution and the defense, is inconsistent with the accused's innocence."

Mr Bernacchi then dealt with the salient features of the case.

Hearing is continuing.

The Full Court comprises Mr Justice J. R. Gregg, Senior Puisne Judge, and Mr Justice W. A. Blair-Kerr, Acting Puisne Judge.

Weekly survey of American economy TIGHTER MONEY POLICIES

The only cloud hanging over the U.S. economy this past week

New York, Jan. 17.

Only one cloud hung over the U.S. economy this past week as it swung into a predicted best ever new year: Apprehension of tighter money policies to come.

With major labour disputes cleared off the decks and a new inflationary spiral held in check temporarily by statements to keep the currency at its level, economies saw in higher credit the only way of securing their future.

The apprehension showed itself best in the stock market where issues for the past week were depressed and rallies failed. The selling was ascribed to worries over firming interest rates. It was noted that the U.S. Treasury's latest offerings of $1,500,000,000 one-year bills sold to yield better than five per cent, which is well above what the U.S. is permitted to pay on long-term bonds.

Public interest

Public interest has recently been great in these Treasury issues. Preference for bonds, whether government or corporate, means competition for the stock market and doubtless has contributed to the recent liquidation of junior securities on the stock exchange.

The stage was set for an imminent change of the Federal Reserve System's discount rate when the system charged raised

London Market stages a late recovery

London, Jan. 17.

Stock markets staged an end-week recovery after a hesitant start under Wall Street's influence. Friday's modest buying bout, with few sellers about, lifted the Financial Times index to 334.2.

The drift in the early part of the week halted Thursday, Friday's brightness brought a rise of 2.0.

After the first minor shake-out following a near non-stop boom since last October, the index is now only 8.7 points below its record peak 342.80.

Wall Street's fall and persistent fears that at some stage Britain must adjust her interest rates in line with higher rates obtaining elsewhere, were behind the lacklustre performance in the early part of the week. Things Thursday brought no change in the bank rate.

Improvement continued after the news that the Board of Trade had approved industrial building plans in the final quarter of last year which were some 36 per cent bigger than in the same period of 1958. That followed a series of good company reports, more take-over bids and company mergers bringing rises in these sectors.

INTEREST FEARS

Gilt-edged, in the shadow of interest rate fears, put up a listless performance and showed losses over the week. Consols 2 1/4 per cents dropped 9/16 to 240 1/2. War Loan 3 1/4 per cents dropped a similar amount to end up 1/16.

Gold's had a mixed week but showed good spots and towards the end of the week St. Helena was higher while Centrespot, Western Reefs and Libanon were steady.

In diamonds De Beers lost 2 1/4d. over the week to close at 100s.

Dollar stocks behaved in tune with Wall Street. U.S. Steel lost 1/4 point, on the week Bethlehem Steel dipped three points. Chrysler fell seven points over the week to 121 1/4 and General Motors dropped five points to 97.

Oils were erratic, quiet ended

first with Burmah rising

5/4d. and less were quietly firm and generally better where changed.

NEW INVESTORS

Market men have been watching the reaction among those classed as "new" investors whose entry into the field as the boom surged helped cause a tightness of stock. As far as can be judged, the newcomers have not penetrated into selling on the first signs of adjustment.

The tone of the market remains healthy.

Trading profits in 1959 of nearly 3,000 companies showed a general payment through the year, jumping by 13.7 per cent. Since earnings in the year rose only 3.8 per cent the implementation was that companies generally are following more liberal distribution policies. This, in turn, was seen as meaning company boards are looking for better results in 1960.

On Monday the market ran into heavy selling that knocked industrials down 5.7 points, their widest loss since the market for these stocks declined 9.14 points on September 8.

Tuesday's loss amounted to 6.73 and Wednesday's to 3.9. The market rallied 4.9 points on Thursday and slipped 0.85 for the group on Friday.

INDUSTRIALS FALLS

So far in 1960 industrial shares have fallen. In eight of the ten sessions the losses amounted to 30.18 points and the two gains to 10.50 points, leaving the average down 19.68 points from the 1959 close.

On Monday the market ran into heavy selling that knocked industrials down 5.7 points, their widest loss since the market for these stocks declined 9.14 points on September 8.

Tuesday's loss amounted to 6.73 and Wednesday's to 3.9. The market rallied 4.9 points on Thursday and slipped 0.85 for the group on Friday.

INDUSTRIALS FALLS

For the week, the industrials closed at 050.68 off 10.62; railroads 157.98 off 0.12; utilities 87.13 off 0.56; and oil stocks 210.34 off 3.52.

All sections on the market were hit. Electronics took a severe drubbing in several instances. Railways outperformed the industrials and utilities moved narrowly.

CLOWING REPORTS

Government reports were slow to December. During the month industrial production came within one percentage point of its record high, steel operations set a new record, employment fell—each a contraseasonal move because of the return to their jobs of the steelworkers.

Small investors turned to the Treasury bill market and were able to buy 30-day bills that will give them a return of 5.30 per cent. The yield had not been higher but it had not been for the demand of the small buyers in this market which ordinary people should remain separate.

Seeing this thereby shut out from the common market and fearing the effect of its own trade, Britain therefore set up the "Outer Seven."

ECONOMIC STRUGGLE

Hence the economic struggle developing among the very nations upon which the United States must depend for its allies. Aside from the effects on Europe, the two economic groups also have an adverse effect on other economies, notably those of the United States and Canada.

The U.S. presently exports more to the Inner Six than does any member of the Outer Seven.

But it must do so now as a disadvantage as compared to any member of the trading group.

In an effort to bridge the gap between the Inner Six and the Outer Seven, the U.S. and Canada will meet in Paris the Middle of January.

As of now, it appears the bridge will be a difficult one to construct because of the political nature of the "Inner Six"

and the "Outer Seven,"

which are in direct opposition to it.

HAILS NEW U.S.-JAPAN SECURITY TREATY

Paid-for marriages to gain U.S. entry

San Diego, Jan. 17. An American woman told a court that she married a Portuguese for $1,500 so that he could enter the United States on a non-quota visa.

The girl was June Jones, 37, the man she married, Manuel Virisimo.

He is one of six Portuguese aliens convicted last week of conspiracy to evade the U.S. immigration laws through paid-for marriages.

All six were sentenced to six months in prison, suspended on condition they leave the United States. They were also fined $250.

DIVORCED

They were divorced by their brides after they were admitted to the U.S.

The Assistant United States Government attorney, Mr George Kell, said at the trial: "We believe that thousands of Portuguese have gained entry by the same method." He estimated the number in San Diego alone at 200.

Six other members of the Portuguese colony were convicted of conspiracy to fix the marriages.

'Bardot Bras' backed by psychologist

New York, Jan. 17. Advertising programming is being planned in the U.S. to publicize "Bardot Bras." They're the creation of the Lovable Brassiere Company of New York.

A psychologist-approved program is being planned in the U.S. to publicize "Bardot Bras." They're the creation of the Lovable Brassiere Company of New York.

Ever since Brigitte Bardot became a mother the company has been hesitant about its new bra. But the psychologist hired to look into matters approves of the white idea.

Advertisements will picture a demurely clad Brigitte Bardot over the words: "Now the secret of the Bardot look is yours."

Arthur Garrison, President of the Brassiere Company, explained that company officials had consulted a psychologist since "the advertising approach required the most delicate and tasteful handling."

The psychologist, Dr Nandor Fodor, says: "Throughout history the enchantress has been the only symbol creating logically in the most sexed-up members of her sex the desire to emulate."

Certainly the product in question provides an obvious means to accomplish this." —AP.

Scholar with a good memory defies library

An Irish scholar with a good memory and a homemade printing press has become a one-man headache for the big New York Public Library.

The scholar, Peter Kavanagh, who holds a Doctorate from Trinity College, Dublin, has published a volume of extracts from the correspondence of John Quinn, early American patron of artists and writers—despite a ban which will not expire until 1980.

Day after day, for weeks, Kavanagh went to the manuscript room of the main library building and read letters written by Quinn, who became a success. New York lawyer, and letters to Quinn by such writers as Joseph Conrad, U.S. Eliot, A. E. Housman, James Joyce and Lady Gregory.

AGREEMENT SIGNED

To gain access to contents of the manuscript room, Kavanagh signed a form agreeing not to copy or publish anything contained in "old correspondence."

Quinn was 85 when he died in 1924. During his lifetime he aided artists and writers whose work was then being condemned by critics.

He explains his actions thus: "Quinn is the absolute key to the 20th century in art and literature, as far as one man can be a key. Yet he's totally forgotten."

"If he had not wanted these letters to be published he would have had them locked up for 80 years. I conclude that he must be available."

The library has directed its counsel to "prosecute vigorously" against Kavanagh, who says he will offer his edition "only to libraries and recognized collectors" at $50 a copy. —AP.

Elephant used to breach canal break

Renares, Jan. 17. An elephant was used recently to plug a breach in a canal bank at Nevada. When the canal sprang a leak and a portion of the bank gave way, threatening the local water supply, the authorities sent into service an elephant which knelt down in the breach and stopped the flow of water until the authorities could build a wall of brick and bamboo. —China Mail Special.

HORROR HORSE TRAFFIC

London, Jan. 17. Several British newspapers today give prominence to horrific reports of the traffic in horses for the meat market between Dublin and Paris.

Correspondents of the Daily Herald, Daily Mirror and Daily Telegraph describe the arrival of Irish horses in Paris for their dispatch in slaughterhouses there.

Earlier headlines across the Daily Herald's front page read: "Horror of the doomed horses. I see brutality and death in the snow."

Their reporter writes: "Dying and frozen to utter helplessness, 137 Irish horses met their journey's end here today in scenes more horrible than I have ever witnessed."

PROTEST

In Dublin today, members of organisations protesting against the export of horses kept a vigil to draw watch on Dublin's docks before the City of Waterford sailed with 143 horses for Dingle.

It was the first shipment on this vessel since 47 horses perished or were shot aboard her during a storm in the channel in December.

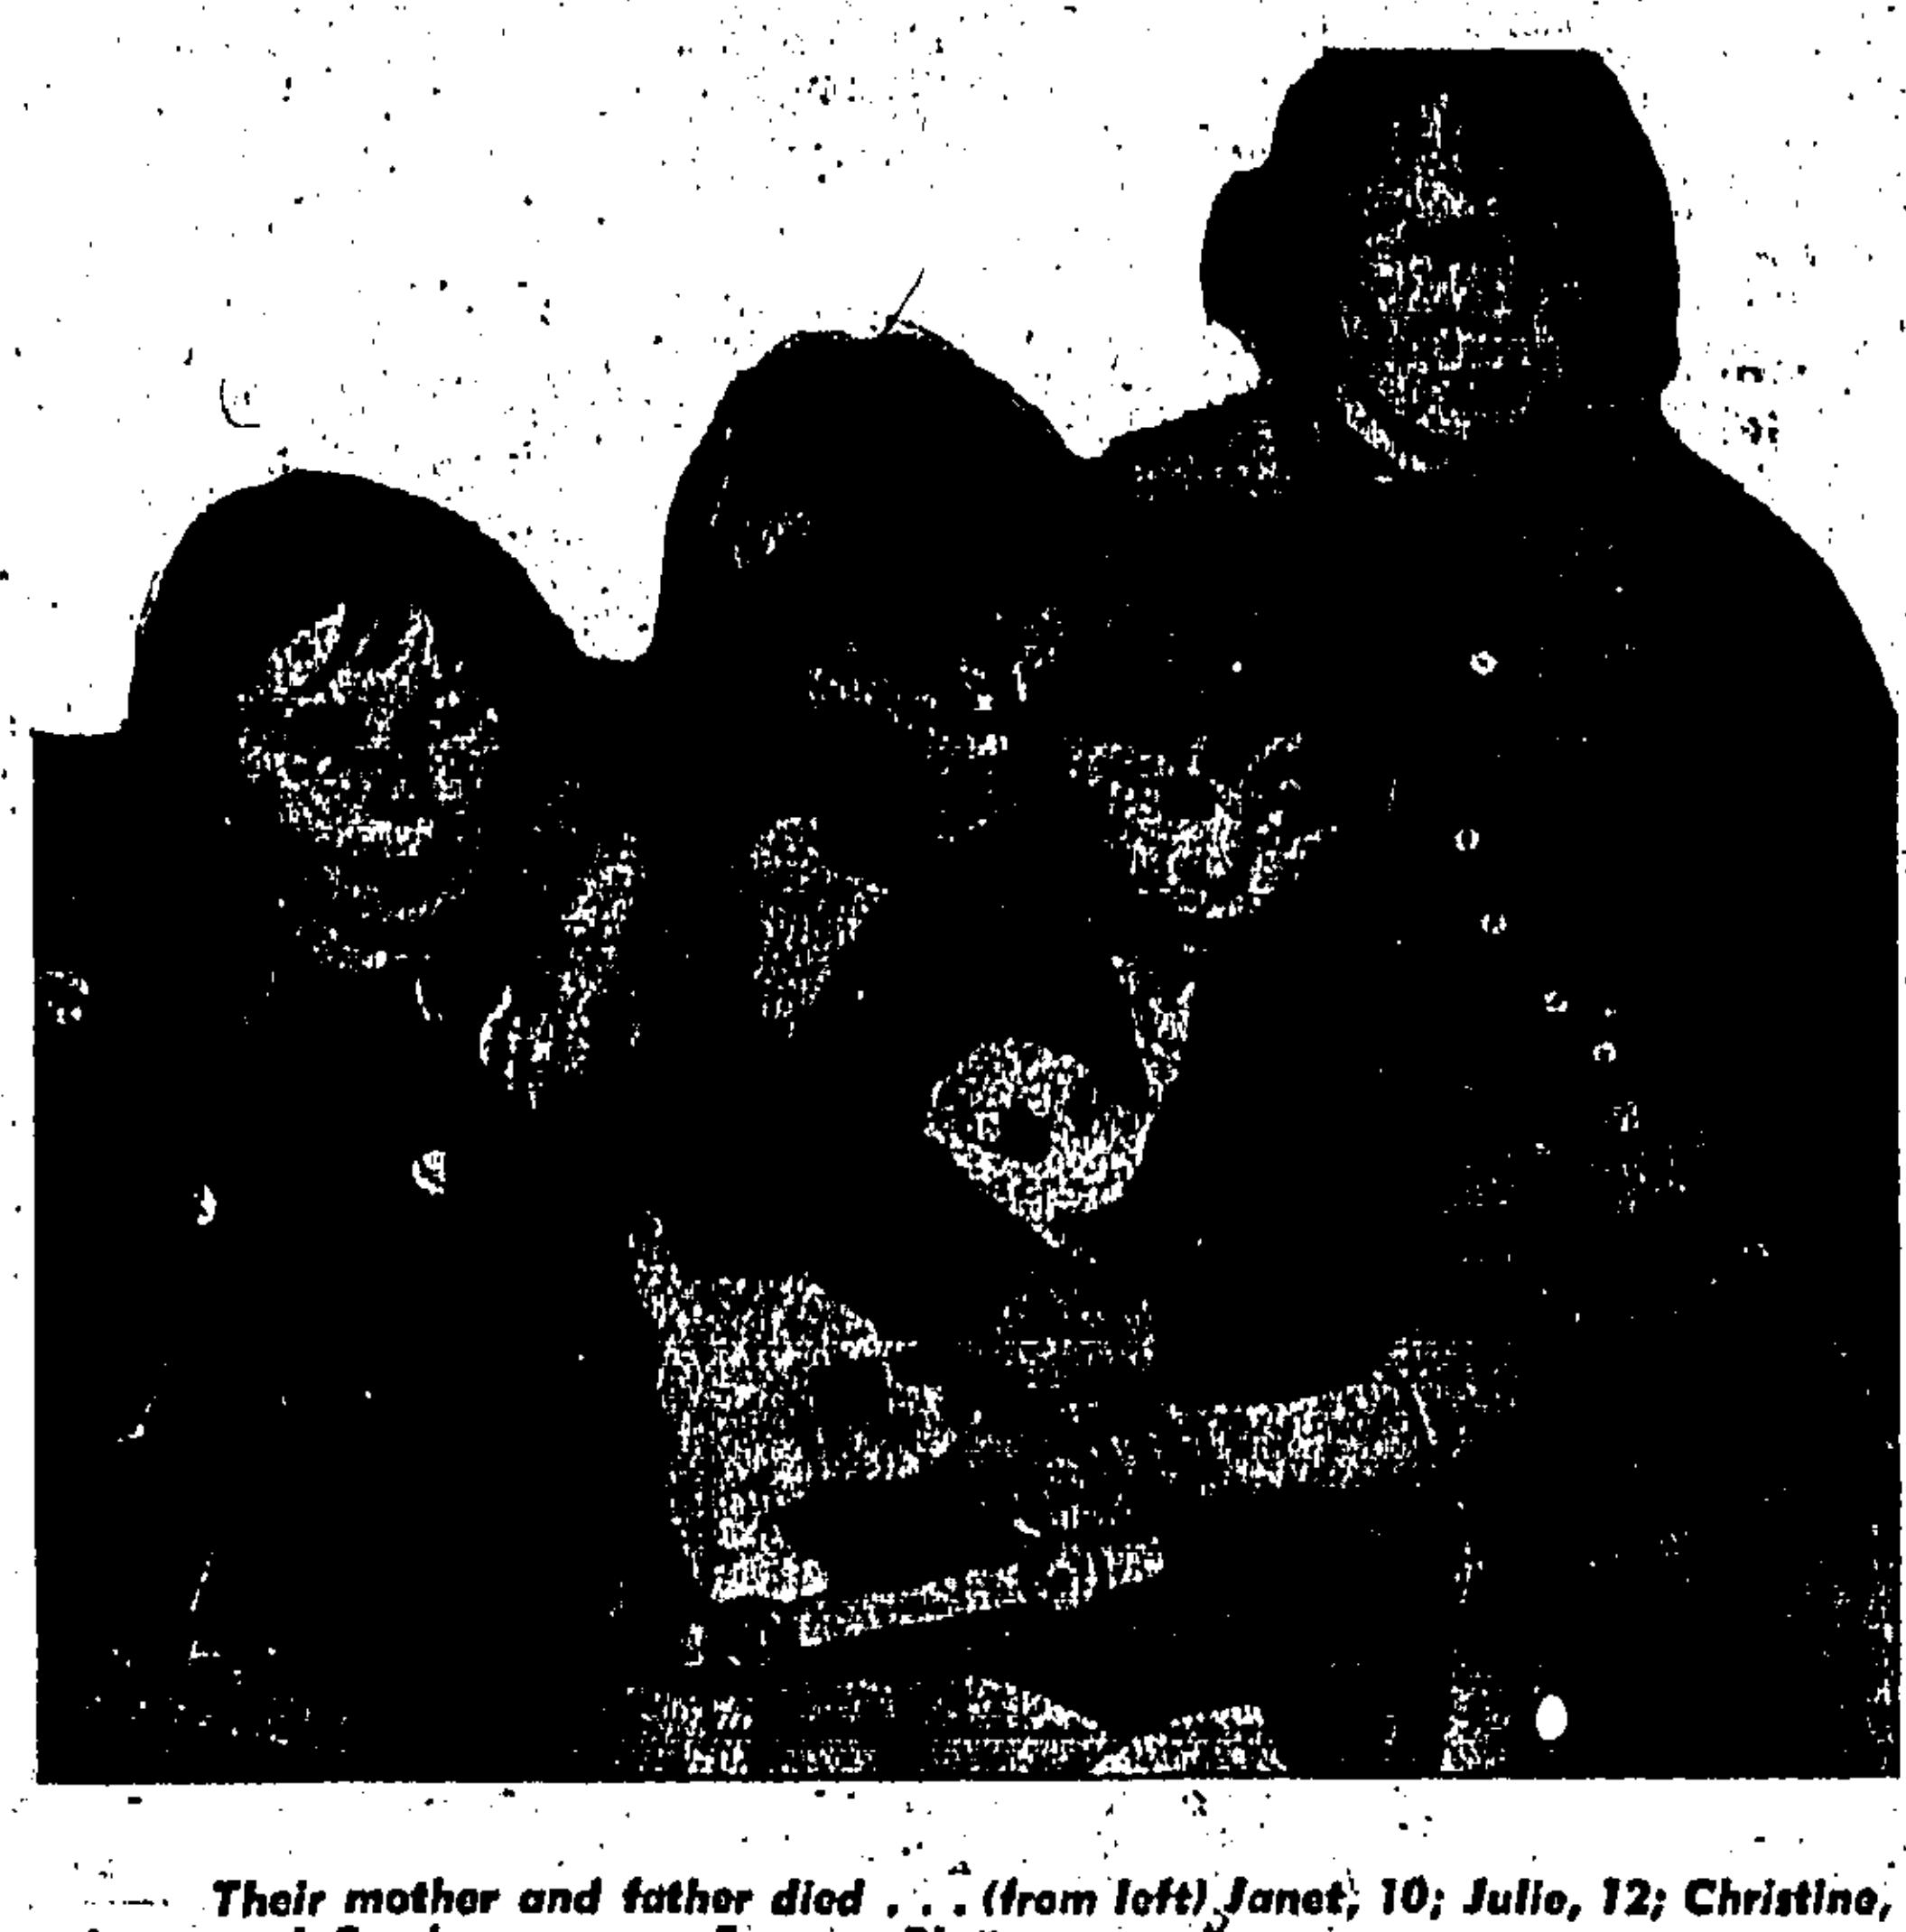

Police squad cars patrolled the docks and kept agitators at a distance while the ship was loading but newsmen were invited aboard by the shipping company and shown the loading and the accommodation provided for the animals.

HYPNOTICAL

The agitation to stop the trade is being encouraged by British animal protection societies and British newspapers, and Irish newspapers today describe it as "a hysterical campaign against a legitimate trade."

The Sunday press described the agitation as manufactured and pointed out that of 234,000 horses sent to Britain and the Continent in the last eleven years the casualties at sea were less than half of one per cent. —Special and AP.

Offer to adopt five young victims of recent tragedy

Melbourne, Jan. 17. If a Melbourne man has his way, five little London orphans, whose parents were killed six days ago in the crash, are in hospital with head injuries and a broken pelvis.

Mr Christensen, spoke to a business friend in London who is now trying to arrange the adoption.

Mr Christensen and his wife, Elmo, a Melbourne businesswoman, said: "We have the room and the means to take the children. There are several schools and plenty of parklands nearby."

The Melbourne man, television and radio personality Chris Christensen, wants to adopt all five.

Less than three hours after he read about the car smash which killed Albert Wood, 36-year-old coalman and his wife, Daisy, and orphaned their five daughters, 12-year-old Julie knew of her parents' death. Her eyes were red, but she became a little mother to read a fairy story to her sisters, Janet, 10, Sandra, seven, and Christine, three. Irene, the only one in the crash, is in hospital with head injuries and a broken pelvis.

Mr Christensen spoke to a business friend in London who is now trying to arrange the adoption.

The children will not be split up. Our family occupies the whole of this house. My wife, daughter, and I live in the basement. The Woods had the ground floor. Most of our family live on the floor above."

He added sadly: "Albert had so wanted to take out all the children in the car for a Sunday treat." —China Mail Special.

Big London demonstration against anti-Semitism

London, Jan. 17. A massive, five-deep column of silent people, stretching for 1½ miles, marched through the half-deserted streets of London on Sunday protesting anti-Semitic outbursts in West Germany.

Also killed was their friend, 48-year-old Sidney Ward, of Waterton Road, Maida Vale. Seriously ill in hospital is Mr William Hubbard, of Clarendon Street, Southgate. Mr and Mrs Wood were giving him a lift.

The driver of the car, 32-year-old Ronald Klein, of Highgate Road, North Kensington, was only slightly injured.

Soon after the tragedy at the Wood home, only fair.

BY THE WAY

by Beachcomber

I SEE that a man has been boasting that he went round the deck of an American liner during an Atlantic crossing thus covering nearly 1,000 miles.

For sheer enjoyment this beats the walk from Chelmsford to Dover. This man has invited Dr Barbara Moore to accompany him on another 1,000-mile walk round the decks of a liner.

Companionship is needed on such occasions, but what will the police do when large bodies of people start mass-walking?

When a few thousand men and women set out to spend 46 hours crossing and recrossing the road at Hyde Park Corner, will they be given priority for the sake of the record?

Altrincham supports SA

PROTEST AGAINST INHUMANITY
AND INJUSTICE

London, Jan. 17. A Conservative Party peer today spoke up for the Labour-supported campaign to boycott South African goods, prophesying "important tactical results" in the fight against the colour bar.

Lord Altrincham spoke at a protest meeting along with Fr Trevor Huddleston, longtime opponent of South Africa's racial policy, and African leaders here for the Kenya constitutional talks.

"We hope that the boycott will influence the course of events in South Africa so that revolution, when it comes, will be a peaceful revolution and not a violent one," Lord Altrincham said.

He made clear that he spoke only for himself and not for the Conservative Party in supporting the boycott, which has already won support from the Opposition Labour and Liberal parties.

Important results

Lord Altrincham said he did not think the boycott would ruin the South African economy or cause the Government to crash.

"We do believe it will have important results, tactical results in South Africa, particularly in regard to wages," he went on.

"We hope it will have important results throughout the free world in setting an example of what can be done by independent private, unofficial people in organising themselves in peaceful protest against inhumanity and injustice."

Lord Altrincham has often taken more radical positions than his party, most notably when he criticised the public speaking of the Queen. —AP.

Flying Officer Jones, 22, an attractive blonde, comes from Newbury, Berkshire.

About 3,000 West Germans cheered her at the coronation ceremony in the Kaiser Friedrichshalle, attended by the Town Council and many British Service families.

The traditional cry of "Be true to us" went up as Patricia and her 20-year-old West German consort, Robert Floraek, were crowned by the Mayor.

PROCESSION

The ceremony was the first of a series of engagements in Moencheng - Gladbach carnival celebrations which will culminate in a two-mile procession through the town on March 1.

Flying Officer Jones is employed on secretarial work at RAF headquarters here.

The carnival organisers approached the RAF saying they would like a British girl to be this year's carnival princess, and the Air Force named Flying Officer Jones. —China Mail Special.

London, Jan. 17. There was "no material change" in the condition of Mr Aneurin Bevan, 62-year-old deputy leader of the British Labour Party, a medical bulletin said here tonight. —Reuters.

Scots girls best air hostesses

Edinburgh, Jan. 17.

An American airline, Trans World Airlines, which believes the Scottish girl makes the "air hostess with the mostest" following a recruiting drive here last year, is returning to Scotland for an even bigger campaign on March 1.

TWA said after last October's recruiting that Scotland was the most successful area in Britain, and that Scots girls were outstanding in looks, intelligence, poise and personality.

In March TWA selection board will spend a week here and a week in Glasgow.

20 MORE WANTED

"On this occasion we hope to find at least 20 girls from Scotland for the jobs in America."

"We are convinced that Scots girls possess most, if not all, the qualities which go to make the ideal air hostess," an official said. —China Mail Special.

... AND RANDOLPH
CHANGES HIS SHERRY

London, Jan. 17. Mr Randolph Churchill, son of Sir Winston Churchill, said tonight he was going to drink South African sherry instead of Spanish for a month in opposition to the proposed boycott of South African goods by the Labour Party.

The Labour Party move is a protest against the South African policy of apartheid.

Mr Churchill, in a television programme, said: "I think a gesture of this kind is singularly inappropriate and naturally silly, coming as it does from the Labour Party. We are supposed to drink sherry from Spain to help General Franco and not that from South Africa."

"I normally prefer Spanish sherry, but to show what I think of this boycott, for this one month, I shall drink South African." —China Mail Special.

GRANTED
DIVORCE

London, Jan. 17. Mr John Lanchbury, conductor of the Royal Ballet Company, was granted a decree nisi in the London Divorce Court yesterday on the ground of adultery by his wife, Australian ballerina Elaine Fifield.

This was alleged to have taken place in New Zealand where Miss Fifield is now living with their one child, a girl.

Neither she nor the respondent, Mr Leslie Farley, denied adultery.

The court was told that Miss Fifield started the proceedings with a petition alleging adultery by her husband, but did not proceed after he filed his answer on which today's hearing was based.

DISCRETION

Mr Lanchbury was granted the court's decree in regard to his own admitted adultery. He did not ask for costs against Mr Farley and did not oppose the wife's application for custody of the child.

IS YOUR WIFE BEATING YOU?

Strange, the kind of men who resent it...

...not with a stick, but with a wage packet, perhaps? For with the sixties only a few weeks old, a report is published that shows a dramatic increase in wives who go out to work—a much bigger increase than anyone suspected. There are now FOUR MILLION working wives in Britain alone. The other week male complacency took a hefty knock with the news from St Albans that most of that town's local government was in the hands of women. Day by day women take a bigger part in life, whether they are latch-key wives who care for until their families arrive, and those in the late forties who return to work when the children have finished school.

One employer, who owns a number of fashion shops, reported to Dr Klein: "The older married women do the most conscientious work, because a job to the average young people is something to be got over quickly so that they can then enjoy themselves."

AN INTEREST

Trevor Evans
IN Britain we have reached the surprisingly high level of one wife in every three contributing to the family budget.

That is much higher than the last census suggested. It calculated one in four.

Dr Viol Klein, of the London School of Economics, recently published a fascinating study called "Working Wives".

It falls naturally into three parts, each absorbing in its way:

- Why wives go out to work.

- What their husbands think of it all; and

- The attitude of men generally.

Half of the women who work today are married. The overwhelming reason for taking up a full-time or part-time job is cash. This helps to get the luxuries of life in providing improved education for the children, better furniture or better family holidays.

It is significant that hardly any said they were working to escape real penury.

But money is not the only incentive. There is boredom at home, not enough to do with the advent of labour-saving equipment, and the need of social stimulus through meeting fresh people.

But there was no urge for emancipation among these married women, nor did any of them echo the old suffragette ideas.

I'm All Right Jack

PART ONE

THIS IS the China Mail version of "I'm All Right Jack," the Boulting Brothers' film that penetrates with chukkles the present industrial philosophy. Windrush, an employer's nephew, has been duped by his uncle into starting work in his factory—his uncle's plan being to form a tributary and then to make a contract to an associate, making £100,000 tax-free profit. For the moment Windrush is out of trouble with the chief shop steward—in fact he is lodging at his home.

A good day's work for a fair day's pay—now that's being really provocative

BY PETER EVANS

UNCLE BERTRAM prepared to hot up the campaign to push his workers into the strike action which would line his pockets with a cool tax-free fortune.

He had decided to give an after-dinner speech in the factory canteen, to celebrate the important new arms contract the firm had signed with a Middle East Power.

His speech was cunningly designed to incite the workers' hostility. Flanked by the smiling Arab Muhammed and Cox—who were to share the fat profit if Missiles lost the contract to Cox's company—Uncle Bertram called for silence.

The price

"Export or die is no empty phrase, my friends. We must produce and sell our goods at the right prices. If we fail to do that, the result would be starvation," said Uncle Bertram who was clearly many miles from starvation himself.

"To do that," he went on, as his audience shifted restlessly amid a low rumble of outraged mutters, "To do that, means the elimination of all slackness. The greatness of this old country of ours was built on honesty, hard work and a sense of duty. An ideal which, I'm afraid, many of us have lost sight of."

Hitchcock, the personnel manager, his beady eyes bright with fear, as he watched the works committee huddled in silent fury, realised that his policy of playing ball with the unions was crumbling rapidly.

AGITATED PERSONNEL MANAGER HITCHCOCK TERRY THOMAS

The meeting

The works committee had an emergency meeting immediately after the speech.

"Brothers, this means trouble," Chief shop steward Kite, spoke like a pacifist general who realises that war is suddenly inevitable. "I have no hesitation, brothers," he declared sadly, "in categorically delineating that speech as bare-faced provocative of the workers."

The man with the build of a beanpole said: "On a point of order, Brother Chair, I would say we're left with no option."

"Hear, hear," sang the shop stewards automatically, wondering what Beanpole was talking about.

The timing

Kite gave them the lead. "Precisely brothers," he said. "Up to now we've been bending over backwards to be placatory to the management, but if I am to ascertain the sense of this meeting, from now on—no concessions."

The first part of Uncle Bertram's plan to close his factory with a strike had gone well. And Mr Walters, the face-twitching Time and Motion expert, had now managed to get Stanley Windrush, the planted pawn in Uncle Bertram's plot, alone and with evil flattery was persuading him to increase his tempo of work.

"All right, I'll prove it," Stanley roared off briskly while Walters grabbed at his stopwatch. A few minutes later, Stanley returned with a pile of contracts on his fork lift truck.

"There," he said in proud triumph.

"You may think me an awful fool but what are you doing?"

Stanley was naively delighted at the man's interest in his work. "Oh, I'm shifting these crates from the stores for loading."

"I see. One crate at a time. I suppose that's all the truck will take?" Walters suggested cautiously.

"Oh no, not on your life," said Stanley airily. "That's just the way we usually do it. I could take two at a time. Three, even."

Walters played surprised.

"Really?"

"Yes. I'll show you if you like."

"Oh, I don't believe it," Walters cried him artfully, his face twitching excitedly.

"Correct, brother," Kite concluded knowingly. "Which brings me to a very serious matter. Brother Windrush, did you or did you not corroborate with the management yesterday afternoon in this matter?"

"Me?" Stanley said startled. "Of course not. I was all by myself loading. Oh yes, except for some other chap."

"Ah!" Kite fell on the phrase like a poor prospector who has struck gold. "I think you ought to know, brothers, that this so-called other chap was in fact the now Time and Motion man introduced by the management."

Minutes later, eyes popping, Kite was in the fork lift truck, blowing his shrill summons to stop work. The drivers, Stanley included, gathered like silent, ash-faced shepherds around their favourite teacher in the playground.

The drivers turned on Stanley accusingly. "But look here," he protested. "I wasn't working any harder—just a bit quicker."

The strike

"Correct, brother," Kite commanded rudely.

"On strike, mate! Sympathy with Missiles," the man said without stopping or looking or caring.

The strike was spreading.

TOMORROW:

The great compromise

—(London Express Service).

Windrush (Les Cornish) breaks for tea with his industrial tutor Knowles (Victor Madsen)

Beanpole glared down at Stanley. "Looking at these schedules, I say you was working like a ruddy block."

"That's it," exclaimed Kite with the tired, empty pleasure of a jigsaw puzzler who has discovered the last piece fits. "You heard what old Tracey said in his speech about working with coloured labour?"

"You can see their policy, brothers—making these jobs such a sweat that only the blacks would take them."

He turned on Stanley angrily: "The next thing is we'll have the blacks here doing our jobs like on the buses in Birmingham," he shouted, his years of reading Lenin and Stalin hissing out of him like bad air from a punctured tyre.

"Come on Kite, what we gonna do?" Knowles demanded. "Come straight out, I'd say."

"Us come out!" Kite replied with heavy sarcasm. "I tell you brothers, EVERYONE'S COMING OUT."

All wrong Jack

The next morning Cox and the smiling Arab Muhammed listened to the news as they drove to Cox's factory. Union Jack Foundries, in a sleek, shiny Bentley. Mr Muhammed's Government had cancelled its contract with Missiles.

"But this valuable order will fortunately not be lost to Britain, the remote, uncolonised colonies of the announce said. "It has been revealed that the contract has been reallocated to Union Jack Foundries Ltd, of Clapton."

"It's in the bag," Cox chuckled.

"Your Government forks out the extra £100,000 for us to do the job, and you and me and old Bertram split it, one two, three, Easy."

But the chuckle died on his lips. For as they approached the Union Jack Foundries, a long, steady stream of workers could be seen coming out of the main gates.

Cox braked to a neck-snapping stop. Glistening beads of sweat already on his forehead, Cox sprang out and grabbed the first man he could.

"Here, what's going on?" he demanded rudely.

"On strike, mate! Sympathy with Missiles," the man said without stopping or looking or caring.

The strike was spreading.

Now it's official—the Bomb

is not enough

By TOM POCOCK
LONDON

AN entirely new type of warship is about to join the British Fleet. She is the commando-carrier Bulwark. Soon she will be ready to whisk 1,500 Marines about the world and set them ashore with the couple of dozen helicopters and the flotilla of landing craft she can carry.

The Bulwark will be the latest thing in "conventional weapons," which is significant, because it is these that Mr Harold Watkinson's forthcoming Defence White Paper will stress.

Since Mr Duncan Sandys departed for the Ministry of Aviation to the subdued cheers of admirals, generals and air marshals, British defence policy has been re-examined. And the question now being asked in Whitehall is: have we got our defence plane back to front?

Hitherto it has always been assumed that Communist expansion could be kept in check by the Anglo-American ability to obliterate Russian cities with nuclear bombs and rockets.

Perhaps marriage will bring a change to their views. But Dr Klein adds: "Those who are married—and married perhaps to professional women—have adjusted their views to their present circumstances and depend less on preconceived ideas of a woman's place."

Around the world—and particularly in Europe—an elaborate system of military trip-wires has been erected. Once you cross that line, potential aggressors were warned, we will blow your homes to bits.

Believing this, Mr Sandys made all other weapons and several nuclear submarines are in commission, although none has yet ventured home waters.

With 16 nuclear-headed rockets to be launched underwater and travel 1,500 miles—could, they claim, provide the entire necessary British deterrent.

Each boat would cost £17,000,000, but, it is argued, would have three major advantages over the Blue Streak.

Technically, the Allied navies have the measure of the conventional submarine. It is the nuclear submarine with an underwater speed of 30 knots that is the real danger.

The most effective defence against this is another nuclear submarine backed by long-range helicopters and atomic depth charges.

Ardent navalists see the nuclear submarine not only as a defense, but as a more effective deterrent than Mr Sandys' Blue Streak.

SECOND, the submarine launching pad would not attract a preventive attack on this country and at the same time would be enormously difficult to track and destroy.

THIRD, risk of accidental launch and would be reduced as there would be no need to launch instant retaliation from this country, if for example, a long-range missile accidentally struck the British Isles and a nuclear-scale attack was wrongly believed to be under way.

Submarine-borne rockets, having no vulnerable fixed bases, need be fired only when the state of war has been confirmed.

One force?

If such a Great Deterrent were eventually decided upon, it would mean the transfer of the main striking power from the RAF to the Royal Navy.

Such a reorganisation of the Services, it is sometimes said, calls for the merging of the three into a single force. This has been considered and rejected. The solution may be to make the First Sea Lord, the CIGS and the Chief of the Air Staff responsible only for the internal efficiency of their Services and to set up an Inter-Service defence committee of very senior officers, backed by a large planning staff in the Ministry of Defence, with overriding powers.

The defence planners, however they may be, will find themselves faced with a new task.

Then the Royal Navy would not be the one and only military answer to aggression. They would not have to use a sledgehammer to crack a nut.

And any move away from a nuclear apocalypses is a move in the right direction.

GALE IS BRITAIN'S AMBASSADOR EXTRAORDINARY

LONDON recently sent its most unusual ambassador to New York.

she has played French, Arabian, Irish, American and Cockney parts in films and on TV.

DREAM ROLE

Her chief ambition? To play comedy "British," says Gale in her soft voice, "has a dearth of good comedienne. Comedy is what I want to play."

And her dream role? Eliza Doolittle in the original "Pygmalion" — not the "My Fair Lady" version!

The nicest thing about her prize win as Soho's Queen—quite apart from the screen test, and the all-expenses-paid trip to New York—was that she was able to join her boy-friend and travel more than three thousand miles to see him graduate as a squadron officer in Alabamal.

An actress who has appeared in films, on the stage and on television, Gale has also had great fun making television commercials, advertising everything from pills to plastic rain-coats. In fact, she says she is nationally known in Britain as the nameless lady who exhorts millions of television viewers to buy soap—and port-sauvignon!

Gale worked hard to become an actress. She started with school plays, and became a fashion model on leaving school. In 1955 she accepted an offer of the U.S. 7th Army Special Services to tour with their entertainment company.

Later she studied for two years at an academy of dramatic art and then sailed forth into repertory.

South players who hurried matters by responding two-no-trump wound up with various results but none of them succeeded in making a slam.

Some watched their partners play various heart contracts for 11 tricks only. A couple played no-trump and were only able to make 11 tricks.

At one table the spade slam was reached with North playing the hand. East rudely opened a diamond and North was down one before he could get the lead.

Best plan is to send them to a specialist fur-cleaner, who will not only remove the grime but restore the gloss.

Looking For A Friend

-A Cat Leads The Shadows To Willy Toad-

By MAX TRELL

ALL afternoon and it was a very cold afternoon—Karf and Handi the Shadow Children with the Devil About Names, had been hunting around in the garden poking in among the piles of dried leaves, searching behind the hedge end in the cracks in the stone wall at the back of the garden.

When anyone asked them what they were looking for, they replied that they were looking for a friend of theirs.

There was no sign of Willy at all.

Squire's Question

"A friend of yours?" asked Squire Squirrel, who owned the maple tree that grew near the garden wall. "I just saw you poking in that pile of old leaves. What might a friend of yours be doing under that pile of leaves?"

Squire Squirrel sounded as if he didn't believe that Karf and Handi were looking for any friend at all.

"He might be taking a nap there, dear," Handi said to Squire.

What's His Name?

"A nap in a pile of leaves!" Squire exclaimed. "What's the name of this friend of yours? Do I know him?"

"It's Willy Toad," said Karf.

Squire Squirrel burst out laughing.

"Now look here!" Squire said. "Willy's not the smartest Toad I ever met, but he isn't the most stupid one, either. And Willy has more sense, than to take a nap on a cold afternoon like this in a pile of old leaves."

Ally joins Rupert, and both pals stand horrified, realising what the tracks in the snow mean.

"They're going so fast that he couldn't stop," says Ally.

"They call again and again without getting any answer."

"Come on!" Rupert calls eagerly.

"We must go back to Freddy and start a proper search for Freddy."

ALL RIGHTS RESERVED

There was Willy, curled up in a glove and fast asleep.

Willy wasn't in the old rubber boot.

Then it became dark and very cold and Karf and Handi went inside the house, feeling very unhappy at not being able to find Willy.

"He must be around somewhere," Handi kept saying.

"Let's keep on looking," said Karf. "There's an old rubber boot outside the tool shed. May be he's there."

Wasn't There

Willy wasn't in the old rubber boot.

Then they met the Cat sitting at the head of the cellar stairs.

"Is it a Toad you're looking for?" she asked.

"Because it is, I think I can help you."

"I'd hate to see him get frozen like a cake of ice," said Karf.

Then they met the Cat sitting at the head of the cellar stairs.

"Is it a Toad you're looking for?" she asked.

"Because it is, I think I can help you."

"There's the glove," she said last. "Your friend's in there."

Sure enough, deep inside the glove was Willy.

He was sound asleep. He opened one eye when Handi touched him.

What's The Time?

"What time is it?" he asked sleepily.

Sing Tao . . . . 3, TIGERS' THRILLING TRIUMPH

Sing Tao yards faster than Kitchee in vital League game

By I. M. MacTAVISH

'Where's that Tiger?' How Kitchee's over-publicised, over-rated, over-confident and over-temperamental stars would have loved the answer to that embarrassing question in their first division match at Boundary Street yesterday afternoon.

Giving a magnificent display which surprised some critics, but confirmed the high opinion formed just a week ago, Sing Tao's brilliant youngsters scored a thrilling 3-2 victory over Kitchee. Much more important even than the actual result was the manner in which it was achieved.

From start to finish this was grand entertainment marred only by occasional thoughtless indications by desperate Kitchee defenders who in moments of frustration and agitation resorted to tactics that brought little credit to their side.

The Tigers were tremendous in their sheer enthusiasm. They started running when the first whistle blew and they never let up for a moment until 90 pulsating minutes had passed. They were yards faster to the ball and on the ball than their opponents. The standard of their man-to-man combination made Kitchee's efforts look pretty shabby.

It was a revelation to see a team so young expelling wide cross field passing that was as accurate in execution as it was attractive to watch. The speed of individual players was seen only in flashes: the vital factor was speed of thought and the ability to sum up situations seconds faster than the opposition.

Upsetting play

Time after time Sing Tao ripped the Kitchee defence apart with long direct passes from touchline to touchline and from wing to wing. It was the type of football best calculated to upset a close playing side like Kitchee and only those people who braved the biting wind of a surprisingly cold afternoon can really appreciate how.

The Tigers have found and developed a couple of potent

PETER MAY ADMITS ENGLAND'S BOWLING NOT GOOD ENOUGH

Port of Spain, Jan. 17. Peter May and Walter Robins, Captain and Manager respectively of the MCC tourists, virtually admitted at a press conference here today that their side's bowling was not good enough.

Robins said that it needed a great bowling side to win matches on the type of pitches that MCC had encountered so far, and it was going to be tragic if draw after draw was played, with defensive bowling and field placings throughout a game.

He thought it might have been better if five days instead of four had been allocated to the Colony matches (the matches against Barbados and Trinidad on MCC's 1953-54 tour were each given five days).

May said that if numbers seven, eight or nine in the batting order wanted to stay in without worry, there was much about strokes, it was extremely difficult to dislodge them.

When it was pointed that the Australians in 1953 had experienced no real difficulty in dismissing West Indies players, Robins said: "Oh yes. But they were a fine bowling side."

Jerry Barber leads in Yorba Linda golf

Yorba Linda, Jan. 17. Jerry Barber, using his magic putter, shot a 3-under par 69 today to increase his lead to three strokes after three rounds in the $25,000 Yorba Linda open golf tournament.

Barber had a 54-hole total of 206, on rounds of 67-70-69, 10-under par for the distance.

He bogeyed the 10th hole on the third round, but had enough birdies to compensate.

The diminutive Los Angeles golfer sank a 15-foot putt on the second hole for birdie-3 and 20-footer on the eighth for a birdie-2.

In second place after three rounds was the pleasant-spoken Englishman, Harry Weetman, of London, who shot a 70 to go with his earlier rounds of 68 and 71 for 209.—UPI.

Still experimenting

May admitted that the English slow bowlers were still experimenting.

For instance he was trying to get Tommie Boweough to bowl at or outside the off-stump instead of attacking the middle stump in his normal way, which had not proved successful here.

Brian Shulman was gradually finding his best form, and both he and Freddie Truman were working up to their full pace.

May said that after Truman had bowled three bouncers in one over on Saturday, he had advised the Yorkshirer to advise better use of the new ball and not to waste it.

Stark panic

The Sing-Tao forward line

fired on all five cylinders and through every fibre of the present Sing Tao side. He is playing as well as at any time in his life. They have the right degree of encouragement to the bounding boys in front of him.

The Tigers have found and developed a couple of potential

Top honour

The Sing-Tao forward line

was once again the top honour of the day. The little inside-right was at once the driving force and the steady influence for the keen-as-mustard mates around him.

When things were at their most hectic Chow would calmly kill the ball, impart stability to the movement,

then move it on with uncanny accuracy. . . . and above all he scored two glorious goals.

With just a shade more luck

he might have had another one in the second half.

It is good to see Lee Taktung regarding the blistering form of a couple of years ago. For part of this game

he was faced by the Colony's chosen couple Szeo Yin and Kwok Yau, yet with astonishing ease he showed them every trick in his repertoire and a clean pair of need to boot.

His partner Teung Kuan-kong had to stand up to a lot of heavy punishment but he never shirked a tackle and finished up one of the most profitable forwards on view.

A panther

As the game progressed I began to get a lurking suspicion that the Tigers had quietly slipped a panther or a gazelle into the yellow and black shirt . . .

and I'm pretty sure some of the Kitchee defenders must have very similar thoughts to the flushing raddi of Lau Woon-ching were among the most thrilling examples of wing play we have seen this season.

The 70 yards dash in the second half was the sort of thing to send the blood tingling provided of course you didn't happen to be playing in the Kitchee defence.

That leaves only lanky

centre-forward Fung Ki-leung who is fast becoming a menace to his opponents. He scorns the battering-ram tactics in favour of clever footwork intelligent distribution and accurate shooting. His long strides make him appear slow and cumbersome but when you watch him closely in action you soon realise that is merely an illusion. It is surprising how

PENTANGULAR RUGBY*Police go down to Brigade's stronger pack after fine defensive display

By PAK LO

The Police XV failed to live up to the challenge offered them on Saturday, when after a fine defensive display they went down by 5 points (one goal) to 3 points (one try), to Brigade's stronger and better pack.

At Kai Tak, Garrison, as expected, won easily by 27 points (three goals, four tries) to nil, their threes breaking through as they liked in a series of individual movements in the second half.

Although Police have now dropped in the Pentangular Table from second spot to third they have a game in hand, whilst Club who are languishing in fourth place are in need of just one more win to get them into the top three; in hand, so that the race for the top honours is still wide open as the table below shows:-

|          | P | W | D | L | F  | A  | Pts |
|----------|---|---|---|---|----|----|-----|
| Brigade  | 3 | 2 | 0 | 2 | 11 | 6  | 6   |
| Garrison | 3 | 2 | 0 | 2 | 11 | 6  | 6   |
| Police   | 4 | 2 | 1 | 1 | 22 | 11 | 5   |
| Club     | 3 | 1 | 1 | 1 | 17 | 20 | 3   |
| RAF      | 5 | 0 | 1 | 4 | 31 | 1  | 1   |

Police v. Brigade

Police started with the right idea of smashing the Brigade attacks before they developed. They succeeded, but in attack they themselves could do little as the Brigade pack completely dominated forward play.

Winnings were far superior to their opponents in the line-outs, while McCaw snuffed fiercely with Keill for possession in the scrums, and outshone him most of the time.

In the loose things were more even, Hugh and Roberts played an excellent game, but still the Police could not get the ball back with enough regularity to give their backs a chance.

Brigade, on the other hand had plenty of the ball, and numerous opportunities, but poor handling allied with the crisp hard tackling of the Police backs put paid to most of their hopes.

Magnificent

At no time did the Brigade three look impressive enough to win and there Nell did attempt the odd breakthrough, he was invariably well thumped for his pains by Calderwood.

In defence the Police backs were magnificent. They let only one try through, and that one, like their own started from an infringement for which the referee was unsighted.

A scoreless draw would have been more apt here, though perhaps Brigade deserved the victory by virtue of the hard work put in by their pack.

The Brigade missed four penalties in the first few minutes when time, and again the Police wing forwards were caught offside round the scrum as the Brigade pack carefully held the ball in the back row in an attempt to upset the Police wing forwards and take the pressure off their own backs.

Brigade had the territorial advantage for most of this half, and it was against the run of play that Police first scored.

McNiven, who played his usual sterling game throughout intercepted a pass on his own 25, and whipped through to pass on to Newton. Newton passed to Haigh who in turn sent the ball to Robert who went the rest of the way to score in the corner. No conversion. 0-3.

Lack place-kicker

Brigade swung back with a strong attack. Chapman missed a drop at goal, and then Brigade had chance to level the score with a penalty, but again they missed. It was obvious that Brigade sadly lacked a place-kicker. Finally, just before half-time Brigade, who were still pressed, had their chance awarded.

Martindale intercepted a pass and broke through to send Wyke away. The Brigade pack backed up well, and passed the ball among themselves in a good movement until Nell came up to take the final pass and go the last few yards for a score under the posts. Wilkins converted. 3-3.

Police showed a bit improvement in their forward play in the second half as the Brigade pack tired of keeping up the pressure.

After ten minutes of play inside the Brigade half Police broke through but with victory staring them in the face only a few yards away, they faltered by knocking on the final post.

This seemed to dishearten Police and Brigade went back on

Garrison v. RAF

This was not a bad game but had some terribly scrappy moments especially in the forwards play. Although the Garrison pack got possession most of the time against the weaker RAF pack they were not impressive.

Lineouts and scrums were rugged affairs and the Almen had plenty of time to move their flat-laying threes up to cover the Garrison threes. Although they handled indifferently the Garrison threes, however, always looked as if they might produce something spectacular at any moment, but were forced by the RAF to run across field and seldom gained much ground.

When Garrison did break through, the threes did not back up as they should have done and many a good move was wasted.

Prominent

McDonald and Davies both had an excellent game as halves. Garland shone in the centre, while Cleary stood out among the forwards particularly in the loose where Fitzgerald also put up an impressive display. Fitzgerald opened Garrison's scoring from a loose maul ten yards inside the RAF half. He charged through, shouldered aside the too-high and consequently ineffective tackles of five Almen and scored near the posts. McDonald converted easily. 5-0.

Just on half-time, V. Davies being caught out at first slip by W. W. Vowler off the bowling of W. E. G. Williams after scoring 14 runs. The other batsman is P. V. Dodge who scored 37. The Scorpions managed to pass the Optimists' total of 177 runs for four wickets declared with the loss of eight wickets.

The Optimists, however, are still leading in the first division league table with 31 points in 11 matches, followed by Brigade with 29 points in 10 matches.—China Mail photo.

Series of scores

McDonald opened the scoring in the second half with a lovely blind-side break from a scrum on the 25. Dummifying past the fullback, he scored under the posts. It then converted 10-0.

Mike Davies wins Florida tennis title

Then came a succession of quick scores, all touched down by Garland. The last one was handed to him by Cleary on a plate but the other two were the result of hard work by him. None of these tries was converted. 24-0.

Finally, McDonald again drove through on the blind side, again diminished successfully and Brookes took the pass and scored well out. No conversion.

Winter Park, Jan. 17. British tennis player Mike Davies today won the men's singles championship in the Florida State tennis tournament, beating Australia's Don Candy 6-2, 6-0, 6-4.—Reuters.

Scorpions score repeat win over the Optimists*SUCCESSFUL HILL CLIMB HELD BY VESPA CLUB Lusitanians again sweep the board

By A CHINA MAIL REPORTER

The Hongkong Vespa Club held its first organised outing this year when 19 scooterites took part in a successful Hill Climb yesterday over a three-quarter mile route along the road leading to Stanley Fort.

A unique feature of this event was the Lusitanians'feat in sweeping the board in their respective classifications, a repetition of their feat only a few months back when the same scooterites—Ricky Souza, Eddie Roario and Carlos Soares also won the GS 150cc and 125cc trophies respectively in the Economy Run in Kowloon.

Except for an occasional bus, army lorry and private car there was a negligible amount of traffic either way and this greatly assisted the smooth running of the event.

The moment Foo's "Go" was heard over the air at the finishing point time-keepers Paul Kwok and Charles Curry had the stop-watches working.

Some riders mistimed rather than the gear-change on the first bend and a few scooterists were seen to wobble slightly on account. The more experienced hill-climbers had little to complain about except the strong gusty winds which in one particular stretch slowed them down with the inevitable loss of precious seconds.

Souza drove brilliantly from the word 'go' and Roario's first run was done in an incredible (for a 150 machine), 67 seconds.

The ladies

Of the two ladies who took part Miss Fern Horne was off to a flying start while last year's best all-rounder in the ladies' division, Miss Anna Ding was just a fraction slower when the final results were announced.

Soares' machine, a none too powerful 125 model put up a surprisingly good show.

The first run ended shortly after 12.30 and after lunch the competitors took their machines up the slope for another go in an effort to better the previous times.

After the last competitor had completed his second run Foo and Albert Chu took turns to drive the three different types of Vespa over the route twice. On both runs they were timed and, using the average time of four runs, a coefficient was arrived at and used to determine the best all-round times recorded. The 'class' times were based on the average of the morning and afternoon runs.

Not difficult

The consensus of opinion was that the 1,300 yards route was not a difficult one to navigate since there were too few sharp bends and the gradual up-slope did not tax any of the machines to any appreciable extent. Much 'faster' times would have been recorded had there been no strong winds blowing.

In any case, as was apparent from the subsequent chitchat over the tea at the Lido later, it was a most enjoyable outing—the initial one of a long list of interesting events the Vespa Club have in store for its members in the months ahead.

CAMPAIGN AGAINST DRUGS BEGINS

"Drug consumption is tantamount to death."

People attending the Hongkong and Kowloon Magistrates were told this today by two narcotics posters and pamphlets.

The posters, of varying sizes, were pasted prominently all over both magistrates.

They depict a dejected and emaciated drug addict against a coffin in the background.

WARNINGS

In the pamphlets, a group picture of eight addicts in various postures were shown.

Also information was given on the effects of drug addiction.

"Opium, heroin, pills and morphine can ruin your whole life."

"They cannot cure tuberculosis or any other disease."

The pamphlet also warns people not to attempt taking drugs "or you will be in a pitfall."

The Government is determined to round up the drug peddlers and manufacturers and to raid all dives and factories."

FOOD AND CLOTHING PARCELS FROM THE SPC

Not one member of the 500 families looked after by the Society for the Protection of Children has been forgotten this Chinese New Year.

This week 3,500 mothers and children will receive gifts and food during special parties at the five SPC centres.

At the Stadium at Wanchai, chief centre of the Society, this morning mothers waited patiently with babies on their backs to receive hot drinks, clothing, toys and food.

Each bundle of clothing contains a garment for every member of the family. There are also quilts for the babies.

Tenancy tribunal crowded

The Tenancy Tribunal court was thronged this morning with tenement dwellers from 1061-1073, Canton Road whose premises are the subject of exemption proceedings.

The Tribunal consisted of Mr W. F. Pickering, President, with Mr W. A. Welch and Mr J. M. M. Alves.

Mr A. Hon. of Hon. and Co appeared for the applicant Mr Lai Koon, who wants to replace the 40-year-old three-storey tenement by a modern block comprising seven shops and 35 flats costing approximately $35,000.

Mr Steven Yue is the arreant.

Opponents in the case were represented by Mr Benjamin Liu, instructed by Ford Kwan, Zimmerman and Hastings.

Other counsel were: M. F. H. Wong of C. Y. Kwan; Miss P. Hobbs of Russ and Co.; Mr P. C. Munn of Wilkinson and Grist; Mr W. H. Young; Mr Peter C. Wong; Mr P. C. Lai of Peter Mo and Co.

Writers' strike

Hollywood, Jan. 17.

A writers' strike against the U.S. television industry has grown to include the major movie studios.

If prolonged, the strike could stop virtually all Hollywood TV production.

At issue is the writers' demand for fees on post-1948 films sold to television.—UPI.

Film stars' son rescued

Hollywood, Jan. 17.

The 9-year-old son of film stars Dick Powell and June Allyson was rescued from a narrow ledge half-way up a 100-foot cliff today by firemen and state police.

Two officers climbed to the ledge and comforted young Ricky Powell while firemen raised a ladder to him. One fireman climbed the ladder and carried him down.

"Boy, I sure was scared," Ricky said when he reached the ground. Then he ran to his home.—AP.

Discharged

Mr D. Benson at Central Magistracy this morning remanded and discharged a 15-year-old student who admitted at a previous hearing firing a 10-bore shotgun which wounded another boy in Clear Water Bay Road.

Sales fever—and shops open half an hour earlier

Sales fever spread like a rash as department stores in the central district opened their doors 30 minutes earlier than usual to enable workers on their way to offices and business firms to shop.

Men as well as women were waiting at 8 a.m. for doors to open and were later seen sorting over cashmere sweaters and posh waistcoats.

Upstairs women shoppers were searching for assistants having secured likely bargains while the salesgirls with great patience were trying to cope with quantities of goods thrown out at them by successful bargain-hunters.

One woman shopper murmured to another, "I don't know why we do it, this sales psychology is far too clever for me nowadays."

Chief Inspector A. R. Clark, Principal of the Police Training School, is proceeding to England on retirement in April after 25 years service in the Hongkong Police Force.

Mr K. A. Bidmead, Assistant Superintendent of Police, Chief Inspector F. E. E. Booker and Chief Inspector R. H. E. Marks left on Home leave on board the Ranchi on Saturday.

During their absence Inspector J. Murphy will act as Chief Inspector, Hongkong, and Inspector L. P. Lane as Chief Inspector, Kowloon.

A MID tremendous excitement, it was officially announced this morning that the population of the Saar basin had returned an overwhelming majority in favour of a return to German rule.

Immediately after the result was announced, thousands of cheering Saarlanders rushed into the streets unfurled Nazi flags, illuminated their houses and set the church bells ringing.

Many rushed to the German frontier, uprooted the barriers and crossed the boundary to embrace their fellow countrymen.

A Land Compensation Board was convened at Kowloon this morning to determine compensation in the case of the 33,000 square feet of agricultural land in Tung Tau village for the building of resettlement estates.

Mr G. R. Smith, Senior Crown Counsel said the government placed the value of the land resumed at one dollar a sq.

He cited that from records of transactions, land in this area with illegal structures on it had been sold for less than a dollar, while a vacant plot charged hands for the same amount and was left vacant after sale.

He submitted that in judging the amount of compensation payable, the board should act only on known market prices.

The board then adjourned to report its decision to the Governor.
